About the Author

Actions portrayed herein are based upon fact and actual occurrences by a Central Intelligence Agency paramilitary agent during the Vietnam conflict, and depicts the environmental conditions encountered. The seven years of gathering field intelligence and performance of daily duties puts him in harms way with a constant threat to his life. Application of his efforts and daily performance greatly enhances the success of the Central Intelligence community projects and saving of countless lives. So that you may understand importance of the impact of an ongoing daily operation the book depicts typical daily encounters, not necessarily in concurrent order but sequential over a period of a seven- year assignment to Vietnam. However, the possibility of death and encounter with danger is constant and accepted as a necessary part of daily life. During his seventeen-year tenure with the Central Intelligence Agency other hazardous paramilitary assignments were performed in Laos, Cambodia, Thailand and Africa, all the part of a special life of an ordinary, but special man. Among his many certificates of outstanding performances he is awarded the coveted Central Intelligence Agency Intelligence Star for valor, for participation in the roof top evacuations of Saigon on 29 April 1975. The evacuation scene atop the Pittman Hotel depicts him offering a helping hand to persons being evacuated, and has been eulogized in People Magazine, New York Times and various other publications including headline stories in the Tucson and Phoenix newspapers. The photo has also appeared on the front of Time magazine and he has appeared on Life Magazines 50th anniversary aired by 20/20, and continues to be shown on epic programs by Discovery, History and major television networks. During his thirty-two years of service to his country he served with the U.S. Navy Amphibious Forces 1943-1946 in the South Pacific, seeing combat action in the Philippine
