Theology Of Luck: Fate, Chaos, and Faith By Rob A. Fringer, Jeff K. Lane

Are all things under God's control or only some things? Do we have a part to play or does God direct everything to its preplanned end? What about events that don't seem to be under anyone's control? Where is God then? For that matter, where are we? These questions and others like them are handled with precision in A Theology of Luck. After considering what kind of God we believe in, the authors paint a relational portrait of a God of love. It is with this idea of God that we find insight into the inexplicable occurrences of life and arrive at a vision of faith and practice that encompasses both God and ourselves. A Theology of Luck is not just about grappling with what we cannot understand about the world. It is about embracing our role as participants in God's loving and ongoing plan for the world. Endowed with grace and the gift of free will, we join God in revealing God's love and vision to the world.

Editorial Review

Review

"For a biblical look at a God who puts questioning God at the heart of the religious quest, and builds participation into the very design of the universe, see Rob Fringer's and Jeff Lane's stimulating and provocative Theology of Luck."

---Leonard Sweet, best-selling author, professor (Drew University, George Fox University), and chief contributor to sermons.com

"Few books bring together essential questions and then offer a profound and multi-faceted theological answer. But this one does so in a powerful and convincing way, as it presents the God of love, relationship, and participation as the answer to life's perplexing questions. A bit of luck may have led you to this book, but I hope you freely read it. And I hope you cooperate with God's efforts to use this book for good!"

---Thomas Jay Oord, Northwest Nazarene University

"For those convinced of God's existence, but wondering what kind of God they believe in, this book serves as fresh food for thought. Jeff and Rob provide us with some fresh perspective on very ancient questions. Their reflections will stimulate your own mind and heart to wonder all over again."

---Reggie McNeal, author of Missional Renaissance and Get Off Your Donkey!

"Throughout the centuries humanity has grappled with their understanding of God. Often God becomes clouded in the context of Christian practices and the secular world. Fringer and Lane challenge us to strip away the trappings which we may have inadvertently brought into our relationship with God and find a sense of renewal so that our lives can be reflections of Him."

---Carla Sunberg, President of Nazarene Theological Seminary

"A Theology of Luck will rock your world and will move to the front-burner the honest conversation all kingdom-minder believers long to have about God, fate, prayer, career, choice, sovereignty, God's part and our part in his redemptive mission, and above all the theology of luck.. Thank you Rob and Jeff for this gift. May it spawn conversations and actions that change us and change the world."

---Dr. Eric Swanson, Leadership Network, Co-author of The Externally Focused Church and To Transform a City
